In December 2006 the two industrial giants Statoil and Hydro announced the merger of their oil and gas activities. Ten researchers have followed the post-merger integration process through a three-year research program. Findings have been reported back to the organization and reports have been confidential as the process was ongoing. On February 17 the main results of the research program will for the first time be presented publicly at NHH. Be among the first to learn Helge Lund's (CEO Statoil) view on how the merger has impacted the company and its employees, and how these findings will be used in the future development of Statoil.

All staff and students of NHH are welcome to join in this event
